3 次の文章を読んで、あとの問いに答えなさい。

In June 1912, a *Dutch ship was sailing to *the East Indies. There was a big storm, and the ship *was blown to one of the many islands in *the South Seas. The ship sank, and the people living on this island saw it. They waited until the storm stopped. Then they went there by ship. They got into the sea and brought up many kinds of things from the ship — chairs, knives, boxes, and so on.

A man who was called *Adepi arrived a little later, so he couldn't find anything useful, only many pieces of *colored paper. But he was very glad to find them, and he put them on the walls of his little house.

A few months later, *Wi Chin, a Chinese *trader came to the island. When he came, he always brought a lot of interesting things with him to exchange for the things made by the people on the island. The people living on the island came to him at once, shouting, "I'll give you a fishing net for that knife." — "Give me a lighter for this doll. I made it by myself." — "I need some more nails and wire."

Wi Chin brought a lot of these useful things from other trading *ports, so he was very busy exchanging goods with them. Adepi came up to the noisy crowd, and said to Wi Chin,

"Do you have any needles and thread?"

"Of course I do," answered the trader, "what are you going to give me for them?"

"I'll give you a big fishbone," said Adepi.

"But I don't want a fishbone," answered the trader.

"Please come to my house and look at it," said Adepi. "It's a beautiful white fishbone. You can sell it in Singapore."

"All right then," said the trader, "take me to your house, and show me your beautiful fishbone. Perhaps I'll buy it from you."

So Adepi took the trader to his little house. When they went inside, Wi Chin just stood there, with his mouth open, looking at the 'colored pieces of paper' on the walls.

These 'colored pieces of paper' were actually the Dutch paper money *worth $50,000. And this poor man was trying to exchange a fishbone for some needles and thread, worth just a few cents! ()

Among American people, perhaps, the most popular *soft drink is Coca-Cola. Both young and old people drink it. The rich man drinks *champagne and the poor man drinks beer.

① But both of them drink Coca-Cola. So we can call Coca-Cola the symbol of the United States. It is also the most famous soft drink in the world, in almost every country on earth.

It was *99 percent sugar water, but people said that his new drink was good for health, for example, a medicine for headaches. Coca-Cola was also used as medicine in those days. It is interesting, isn't it?

Dr. Pemberton wanted to sell Coca-Cola to the people in the city. But the new drink didn't become popular soon and he didn't have enough money to *advertise it. So Dr. Pemberton decided to sell his Coca-Cola rights to a businessman. He was called *Asa Candler. Mr. Candler said, "More people will buy Coca-Cola if they enjoy the good taste of it."

Mr. Candler began to advertise Coca-Cola in Atlanta. In the newspaper, for example, he wrote, "Drink Coca-Cola. Delicious !..." He also made simple signs. The signs said, "Drink Coca-Cola 5 cents." A glass of Coca-Cola was sold for only five cents. It was cheap. He also gave a free glass of Coca-Cola to anyone who wanted to try the new drink. Then he made calendars, clocks, and pictures that showed the name of "Coca-Cola" in red.

③ All these *advertisements made Coca-Cola the most popular in the United States. Soon everyone knew about Dr. Pemberton's drink. Asa Candler was a great businessman. Coca-Cola could become the symbol of American culture.
