Eri was a junior high school student in a small town, and she liked English very much, so she studied it very hard every day. But she didn't have many chances to use English in her town. ① She always thought, "If I lived in an *English-speaking country, my English would be much better." She liked her town, but she really wanted to go abroad *as soon as possible.

One day, Eri's mother asked her to go to a *café with her. ② It was not so big, and Eri didn't think it was special. But when they entered the café, Eri was surprised. ③ All the people working there were speaking English! Then, one of them, a Japanese man, spoke to Eri and her mother. "Thank you for coming. My name is Yamada Taro, and I'm the *owner of this English café. The people helping me here are from other countries. Please enjoy talking with them." "Thank you, I will!" Eri said. She was excited to have a chance to talk in English. She spoke to a man in English. He was friendly, and said, "I am from Singapore." She asked, "Why did you come to this town?" He said, "I found Mr. Yamada's website, and it showed many good things about this town. I also found that I could stay here for a few weeks. I really liked this idea. Mr. Yamada is kind, and I enjoy staying here." ④ His story was very interesting to Eri. ⑤ She enjoyed talking with him about many things in English.

The next week, Eri visited the café again to ask Mr. Yamada about his website. He said, "I opened this café three years ago. ⑥ I've been writing about it and this town in English on my website since then. *Gradually, more people from other countries looked at it, and started sending me messages. ⑦ I always say that they can stay at my house if they do two things." "What are the two things?" Eri asked. "They need to help me at the café. They also need to take pictures at many places in this town and put them on the Internet," Mr. Yamada said. "Very interesting! They can attract new people from abroad to our town. Why did you start working in this small town?" Eri said. Mr. Yamada said, "This is my hometown. When I was a student, I really liked English, so I studied hard every day. I worked in Australia for five years. I enjoyed my life there, but I started to think about my hometown more *deeply. It has friendly people, beautiful nature, and an interesting history. I wanted many people around the world to know that our hometown is wonderful. So I decided to come back and work here. Now, many people check my website and visit this town. They say that they like this town very much. I feel really happy and I am proud of it. Eri, you can do something special in this small town. Of course, going abroad will be a great experience, but before that, I want you to look at the wonderful things around you. If you use English and the Internet, you can share them with people around the world. You can make friends all over the world and make your English better even in this small town!" Eri said, "That's right." Mr. Yamada's idea was really new to her.

That night, Eri told her mother about Mr. Yamada, and they checked his website together. He showed a lot of wonderful things about the town. Eri learned many new things. Her mother said, "Eri, Mr. Yamada taught you many things about our town. Now you should go and see many things in this town and share them with other people. If more people know good things about this town, it will be a better place." "That's a nice idea! First, I will speak about Mr. Yamada and my town in the next English speech contest!" Eri said.
