Sophie : Did you read the article about the ※vending machines that give you short stories?

Toru : Yes, I did. It's a really great idea. I think the first machine was (①) in France.

Sophie : Right. I have (②) it at several places in ※Paris. I tried it and got a piece of paper with a short story written on it. It was fun!

Toru : And the (③) thing is — it's ※free.

Sophie : Right. The article said it's a (④) way to spend short free time at a station or an airport because you need only a few minutes to read the story.

Toru : I also liked that the story is sometimes about the place which the machine is ※set at. Readers will like the story more.

Sophie : Yes, and some stories are from famous authors' books. I think the machines can (⑤) more people to start reading.

Toru : (⑥) people who don't usually read books will be interested in reading.

Sophie : You can't choose a story but getting a ※random story is exciting — like a surprise gift.

Toru : A surprise gift! I want to try it someday, too. I hope they put a machine near our station soon.
